REPORT

OF THE

SUPERINTENDING SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

The Superintending School Committee respectfully presents the following report:

The schools of the town—fifteen Summer, and the same number of Winter—have been under the care and instruction of twenty-five different teachers, four of them males, and twenty-one females.

The amount of money raised by town tax for the support of schools is $1,076.30; amount received from Literary Fund, $73.80.

The average length of the schools is 8 3-5 weeks. The more important statistics of the schools are given in the following table.

Those schools that commenced after the first of November are called Winter schools.

* Board not included.

Here follows a brief statement respecting the schools in the several districts :

DISTRICT NO. 1.

Prudential Committee—Nathan H. Carr. The summer school of eight weeks was taught by Miss Araminta B. Young. I was much pleased with the appearance of the school and with the ways of the teacher who was interested in her work, and, as I thought, had the confidence and good will of her pupils. My second visit was made about three weeks before the close of the school, when I found the scholars apparently interested in their studies and making good progress.

The winter school of five weeks was taught by Mr. Jeremiah W. Sanborn. Overlooking a little restlessness on the part of a few of the scholars, the order of the school, when visited by the committee, was quite good. The teacher endeavored to be practical and thorough in his instruction, made considerable and good use of the blackboard, not only heard the scholars read but labored to teach them how to read ; and on my second visit, considering how short the school had been, I felt that good improvement had been made.

It may be proper to say that the teachers belong to the district and had charge of the schools the preceding year.

DISTRICT NO. 2.

Prudential Committee—John S. Ham. A summer school of eight weeks, taught by Miss Martha A. Chesley who had charge of the school the preceding summer. This school was visited once only, soon after it commencement. At this time there seemed to be promise of a good school. I went to visit the school a second time, but found the house closed, the teacher being sick.

The winter school of six weeks was taught by Miss Mattie L. Eaton. This teacher did not appear as well at the time of her examination as she did in the school room. The school, when visited, was quiet and orderly, and the recitations, especially one or two in Arithmetic, one in Geography, and one in Grammar, (of one scholar, and the only one studying Grammar) were quite good.

DISTRICT NO. 3.

Prudential Committee—David S. Glidden. A winter school of ten weeks, taught by Miss Ella J. Stevens of Alton, the teacher of the school the preceding year. There was good order, faithful, thorough instruction, and good improvement. Perhaps the teacher made her work a little too hard for herself; did not, as we say, "take things quite easily enough;" but I think she endeavored to do her work well. She remarks, "I much prefer short lessons, perfectly learned and fully comprehended, to those much longer, but imperfectly understood. I make it a rule, never to leave a subject till it is well understood, if possible, by every member of the class."

DISTRICT NO. 4.

Prudential Committee—Jonathan P. Hill. A school of one term, taught by the teacher of the preceding year, Miss Carrie W. Clay. As regards nearly all the characteristics of a good school, the one in this district was second to no one in town. Not that the school is what would be called a forward one, or that the scholars, as compared with those of other schools, are remarkably bright, and intelligent. The teacher was interested in her work, knew "how to order" her school, gave thorough instruction, labored earnestly to promote the moral as well as the intellectual improvement of her pupils, and secured for herself their respect and affection. All the movements of the school were quiet and orderly; the recitations were good; in reading, marked improvement was made.

DISTRICT NO. 5.

Prudential Committee—Daniel S. Ayers. A summer school of seven weeks, taught by Miss Mary P. Price,—the second time she has taught in this district. Miss Price is a faithful and successful teacher, quiet and yet prompt, thorough, caring for both the mental and moral improvement of her scholars, seeking to govern her school by securing the good will of her pupils rather than by the exercise of authority.

The winter school of nine weeks was taught by Mr. George C. Parsons,—his first school and in his own district. On my first visit I was afraid the order of the school might not be all that it should be. On my second visit, I found improvement as regards order, but a school, for some reason, considerably smaller than on my first visit. By many of the scholars fair improvement was made. Some of them will think more highly, by and by, of their present privileges than they do now.

DISTRICT NO. 6.

Prudential Committee—Franklin Marsh. A school of one term, ten weeks. Miss Jennie B. Smith, of Pittsfield, teacher. We cannot expect an advanced school in a district where there is only one school of ten weeks for the year. Miss Smith has had considerable experience in teaching, is interested in her work, maintains good order, is easy and pleasant in her intercourse with her scholars, and I feel warranted in saying that under her instruction, good improvement will be made. My second visit, unfortunately, was made on the afternoon of a day, when in consequence of the rain of the forenoon, but few of the scholars were present.

DISTRICT NO. 7.

Prudential Committee—Stephen B. Flanders. A summer school of four weeks. Miss Rebecca J. Paige, teacher. A small school; scholars young, and of course not far advanced. The teacher was young and inexperienced, and not quite as much at ease as she will be, when she teaches again, as I trust she will. She endeavored to do her duty faithfully, and perhaps as good improvement was made, as, in the circumstances, the term being only four weeks, could be expected.

The winter term of fourteen weeks was taught by Miss Addie L. Paige, the teacher of the school the preceding winter. My second visit was made two weeks before the close of the school. The scholars were orderly and attentive; the recitations, considering that there had been no general review of what had been studied during the term, were very good. Some had made marked improvement in reading. Singing was an agreeable, and, I doubt not, profitable exercise of this school during both terms.

DISTRICT NO. 8.

Prudential Committee—Matthias Weeks. A school of twenty weeks—two terms of ten weeks each—taught by Miss Mary L. Morrill, a faithful and successful teacher. She seemed interested in her scholars, and the scholars in their teacher. The order was good, and the improvement very commendable. Says the teacher: "Although the school has been mostly composed of small scholars, yet all, I firmly believe, have endeavored to make the most of their advantages, not only by committing their lessons, but also by cheerfully obeying every rule of the school."

DISTRICT NO. 9.

Prudential Committee—Richard D. Varney. The summer school of fourteen weeks was taught by Miss Celia H. Marsh, who, I think, gave good satisfaction. The order was good, and the teacher labored hard, and not unsuccessfully. Owing to circumstances, beyond the control of the teacher, the examination at the close was not a fair exhibition of the school.

The winter school of nine weeks was taught by Mr. D. Gilman Chesley, of Epsom, a teacher not feared but esteemed and respected by his pupils, maintaining good order with little effort. Good improvement was made by nearly all the scholars. "The interest in the school," the teacher remarks, "shown by the attendance, was gratifying and creditable to both scholars and parents. The improvement in the various studies was all I could reasonably expect, considering the length of the school."

DISTRICT NO. 10.

Prudential Committee—Moses S. Price. A summer school of seven weeks; Miss Laurenia A. Gale, teacher. This was a good school; teacher efficient, scholars interested, good improvement.

The second term of six weeks was taught by Miss Fannie A. Rollins. The teacher seemed interested herself, and able to interest her scholars. Good order was maintained, and in most branches fair improvement was made.

DISTRICT NO. 11.

Prudential Committee—Rufus N. Gale. One term of ten weeks, taught by Miss Mary E. Rowe, of Gilford, a well-qualified teacher, efficient, maintaining good order, thorough in her instruction, able to interest her scholars in their studies.

The teacher remarks: "There are some good scholars in this school, and nearly all seem to realize what they attend school for. Advancement, and yet thoroughness, has been the object, and by weekly reviews, &c., we hope we have, in some measure, accomplished it. The parents co-operate with the teacher, and are deeply interested in the cause of education." The scholars expressed their interest in their teacher by the beautiful present made her at the close of the school.

DISTRICT NO. 12.

Prudential Committee—J. S. Gilman. The smallest school save one. The first term of ten weeks was taught by Miss Clara Peaslee, under whose instruction good improvement was made. The teacher was interested in her work and anxious to do all she could for the good of her scholars, maintained good order, and had, as I thought, the respect and confidence of her pupils.

The second term of nine weeks was taught by Miss Lizzie S.

Sanborn, of Thornton. Made but one visit to this school. At this time there was promise of a profitable school. The school had ended when the notice of the time of its close reached me.

DISTRICT NO. 13.

Prudential Committee—Richard H. Jones. A summer school of nine weeks, taught by Miss Fannie A. Leavitt. The teacher was inexperienced, but she tried to make the school a good one. She speaks of the school as having “been pleasant,” and of the scholars as having “manifested a good degree of interest in their studies.” I should have been glad to have witnessed more interest on the part of the scholars.

The winter term of six weeks was taught by Miss Celia H. Marsh, under whose care and instruction there was, as regards order and the acquisition of knowledge, more improvement than was expected. “At the commencement of the term,” the teacher remarks, “even an uninterested observer could have seen that the order, so necessary in the school room, could not be obtained without much effort; but although the term was quite short, I am happy to be able to say that improvement in order was made, and what is so encouraging to a teacher, the scholars were more interested in their studies as the term advanced.”

DISTRICT NO. 14.

Prudential Committee—George W. Griffin. A school of ten weeks, taught by Miss Addie F. Berry of New Durham. The teacher was young, inexperienced, and not so much at ease in her position as she had a right to be. The order of the school when visited was satisfactory, and I thought good improvement had been made by nearly all the scholars.

DISTRICT NO. 15.

Prudential Committee—George W. Adams. One term of nine weeks, taught by Miss Araminta B. Young. The scholars are young, and of course, not far advanced. The teacher was easy and pleasant in her intercourse with her pupils; aimed to be thorough in teaching, and made, I inferred, considerable use of the black-board.

DISTRICT NO. 16.

Prudential Committee—Moses Price. A summer school of eight weeks, taught by Miss Martha E. Price, a teacher who understands what she undertakes to teach, and aims to make her scholars accurate and thorough in their knowledge. Perhaps a little more ease and familiarity of manner would give her more influence over her school and increase her usefulness. The order was good, and most of the scholars made good progress.

The winter school of seven weeks was taught by Miss Mary A. Dudley,—her third term of instruction in this district. I think, as in her preceding schools, she gave good satisfaction. She seemed to have the respect and good will of her pupils, most of whom made good improvement.

DISTRICT NO. 17.

Prudential Committee—Charles Plummer. The first term of seven weeks was taught by Miss Seddie H. Rowe, of Gilford. This was Miss Rowe's first school. More experience will give her more confidence in herself, which, I think, she is entitled to feel. The order of the school, when visited, was good, and so, for the most part were the recitations. The Register records no visit made to the school, except the two made by the Superintending School Committee.

The second term of ten weeks was taught by Miss Laurenia A. Gale, who discharged her duties in the school room in a way creditable to herself, and, I think, satisfactory to the district. She evidently had the confidence of her pupils and the confidence and co-operation of their parents. The board of the teacher and the wood were given by the district, and the school was lengthened, in consequence, nearly one-half.

DISTRICT NO. 18.

Prudential Committee—Ephraim Tebbetts. The summer school of ten weeks was taught by Miss Laura A. Gale, an able and successful teacher; maintaining good order, thorough in her instruction, deserving and securing the confidence of her pupils. The recitations, at the closing examination of the school, were very creditable both to the teacher and scholars.

The winter school of 8 weeks was taught by Mr. Daniel H. Rowe, of Gilford; a teacher of experience, who manifested a most commendable interest in the mental and moral improvement of his pupils. Having charge of so large a school, composed of scholars of all ages, and having so many classes, it was impossible for the teacher to do what he would in the way of instruction. He endeavored, we think, to discharge his duty faithfully. More attention—none too much—was given to writing than in most of our schools.

Singing was one of the exercises, pleasant certainly, and, I think, profitable. There are good scholars in this school and the improvement of many of them was manifest. I feared that on the part of some there had been a lack of thoroughness. It should be said, however, that none of the last days of the school had been spent by the scholars in reviewing the studies of the term. Not a boy in this large school studied Grammar. If some means could be devised, whereby there could be a graded school in this district, and the school terms be not materially shortened, a very desirable thing would be accomplished. No teacher can do justice to a school of so many scholars, large and small, and of so many classes. To hear all the scholars read, each only a short paragraph, would occupy about half of one session of the school. The teacher must constantly feel hurried, pressed for time, and cannot give the amount of instruction the scholars need. What is wanted is more money and a graded school, and "parents that will all unite in sustaining the teachers in enforcing good and wholesome rules."

From the statements which have now been made it is manifest that in the judgment of your committee, if the schools of the past year have not been all we could desire, no one of them deserves to be characterized as "a failure," and some of them were all that in the circumstances we could reasonably expect or require. Some of the teachers have yet much to learn that they may be in the best sense efficient and successful teachers.

Most of our schools are small, and I have found but few advanced scholars in them—not so many large and advanced scholars as would have been found in them fifteen or twenty years ago. And if a good common school education, at least, is what every child needs and should have, I think it would have been better for some of the children of the present generation if they had belonged to a preceding one. Our schools have indeed improved in some respects, and not a little; but is it not a fact that children cease attending our district schools at an earlier age than they did years ago? In all our schools the past year there have been only forty-seven scholars over sixteen years of age. Twenty years ago there would have been, I think, a hundred at least. More now seek the advantages furnished by our Academies and Seminaries, than formerly; but how will it be with those who are dependent upon the district school for the education they receive? A generation ago, in the country, the boy, large and strong enough well nigh to do the work of a man, as a general thing, would have thought ten dollars, and perhaps less than that, to be large pay for a month's labor; and the girl, almost a woman, if she could find any employment, would have thought herself amply rewarded for a week's work upon receiving fifty cents. Then they could afford to attend, and parents felt that they could afford to send their boys and girls, though well nigh grown up, to the winter school. Now the young man can have a dollar a day for his labor, and the young woman almost, if not quite, as much for hers. And the consequence is, we find now in our district schools only one over sixteen, where twenty years ago we should have found two or three.

Here is an evil. And what is the remedy? Parents must be made to feel that in the district school their children can obtain that which will be worth more to them than the best farm in the State. The young must be made to feel that an education, such as they can obtain even in the district school, giving them self-respect, character and influence, is to be prized "above gold, yea, above fine gold." We must seek to improve our common schools; have neat, comfortable and pleasant school houses; furnish them with the means of instruction; seek after good teachers, those qualified and "apt to teach," and raise more money than we do, all that is needed, that our schools may be made what they should be, and that many, I may say, most of them, may be longer than they are now, by, at least, one or two months a years.

I have found in the schools, to the serious detriment of some of them, quite a variety of text-books. Those more generally used are, the Progressive Series of Readers, Greenleaf's Series of Arithmetics, Colton & Fitch's Geographies, Quackenbos' History of the United States, and Quackenbos' Philosophy. There may be better books before the public than some of these, but these are good books, and I do not see sufficient reason for recommending others to be used in place of these at present. Of English Grammars there are four or five different ones used in the schools. Quackenbos' First Book in English Grammar, and for advanced scholars his "English Grammar," I have recommended.

JOSEPH BLAKE,

Superintending School Committee.
